

ILI Leadership Youth Council – Kenya (2014)

Ms. Phelister Chelimo with the young men of the ILI Leadership Youth Council in front of their latest community project.

Over the last two years, four trips have been made to Kenya to work on the development of a ILI youth leadership council with an emphasis on Public Health. More than 18 students have been provided training and resources to create projects that serve to help the greater community to become healthier. Ms. Pheilster decided to work on the subject of HIV and sanitary health practices. The project shown here is demonstrating how the students are creating a healthier environment. In addition to the work projects (photos), there were several classroom sessions where additional training was provided on the reasons, cause and effects of poor health practices and benefits good community and public health programs. Other ILI students traveling with the team assisted in this project. This program will continue with subsequent trips to Kenya.
